

LIBERTY

in the wild

Sean Merewood/SCW photos

On the Fourth of July, the Carolina Raptor Center released a bald eagle at Huntersville's McGuire Nuclear Station's EnergyExplorium in honor of North Carolina's war veterans and fallen service men and women. Local veteran and Davidson mayor John Woods released the eagle, named Liberty, which was brought to the Raptor Center on Memorial Day 2009 after sustaining injuries from a territorial conflict. An online tracking system, sponsored by Rep. Thom Tillis and the N.C. House Republican Caucus, will allow the public to follow Liberty's migration.

South Charlotte Weekly 7/10/09